Essay on purpose driven life

It's easy to create a child, isn't it? You just need a couple of ingredients – a bit like making a cake. Take one man and one woman, place the male's erect penis inside the woman's vagina, and move it in and out for several minutes. Achieve male orgasm, and ejaculate millions of tiny sperm into the woman. The male sperms will swim furiously, and hey presto, if it's the right time of the month, one of the sperm will find an egg and fertilise it. The foetus will start growing; and nine months later, out pops a child. Easy! Anyone can do it!

Everyone wants children, it's biological, a human drive; and let's face it if we all stopped having children the world would soon start to become a pretty quiet place. Having children is probably one of the easiest things we can do in life, although I can hear you starting to say already "Do you know how hard it is having children?"

But what I'm talking about here is the physical act. It requires no education, no degrees, no intelligence, no money, no house. It also requires no job, no food, and no love (for the physical act). And finally, it requires no discipline, no responsibility, and no knowledge.

In fact, it requires nothing more than a man and a woman to have full sex at the right time for the egg to be fertilised. It is an act we are programmed for, in order to allow the continuance of the human race. We require no specialised knowledge. Even if you have never been to school, or have limited social skills don't worry, you too can have children. It's your right!

Now what?

Every second of the day, a child is born into the world, dependent on its mother for everything, not able to fend for itself, not able to speak, only to cry when it's hungry, and sleep when it's tired.

Being born, and surviving outside is a traumatic experience. In the womb there are no such problems. Nature takes care of everything. Even the mother doesn't have to worry about what to give the foetus to help it develop into a child; and even if she did worry, she wouldn't know what to do. She just has to sit back, and wait, until the day the waters break, and she is rushed to hospital to have it delivered.

You see, human birth is a complex procedure, not like that of a horse or a dog, whale or an elephant. Human birth requires something no other species requires, and that is the intervention of another human to assist with the birth – someone who knows what they're doing!

The baby has to be assisted out of the birth canal, his bottom slapped to encourage him to breathe on his own, and the umbilical cord (that is attached to the navel), removed, and tied off neatly. Next he is cleaned by a nurse, wrapped in a blanket, and if everything is healthy with the child, he is handed to the mother.
