NURSING PERSONAL STATEMENT

When I was young, my parents would always ask me what I wanted to be. I would always tell them the same answer over and over again. "I want to be a nurse," I said. At that time, I have always been fascinated by their white uniforms that made them look like angels. For me, they were heroes. I loved them ever since I was young, that even though I had a vague understanding of what they really do, I wanted to be like them.

At 10 years old, being a nurse was a childhood dream. And now that I am at the point of deciding my career path for the future, there is no other path that I would choose. I want to be a nurse. I have been aiding my grandmother in volunteering at Home for the Elders. Although I had a simple task of talking and listening to stories of the grandparents, making them eat and letting them drink their medicines, I felt the exquisite feeling of what it was like to care for others. That experience helped me develop my interpersonal skills, confidence and awareness for others.

In my opinion, nursing is a profession where you never stop learning. After you graduate, you only get out of the four corners of your classroom. But upon becoming a real nurse, you learn so much more things that can't be acquired no matter how many hours you spend listening to lectures. Care, love, understanding, patience, determination and inspiration are the things that I believe what a successful nurse should possess, and that can't be acquired even with the highest level of knowledge.

For me, Nursing is the only career path that would give me the highest level of satisfaction. I know that your college can help me make this childhood dream come true. I am very enthusiastic about taking up this degree at your college. I believe that I possess the skills, knowledge and motivation needed to successfully finish the course with flying colours and eventually get a job with the endless opportunities I would get from graduating at your college.

Describe the role of national governing bodies in the promotion and development of sport

National governing bodies (NGBs) promote participation in their sports through different initiatives. The aim is to try and get more people to try sport at all levels e.g. through the use of equal opportunity policies so that all people in society can take part - there is no exclusion or discrimination. A key aim is to get different user groups, particularly those that are under-represented in a certain sport e.g. women in boxing, to take part more.

NGBs also aim to increase the popularity and profile of their sport. They often try to target young people to get them interested from an early age so that they may be involved in the sport for life e.g. through schemes in schools such as the Premier League 'Kicks' program. They may also provide coaching and activity sessions, some of which are free, during the school holidays to increase interest levels. By subsidising the costs, this enables greater access for all people in society e.g. children from deprived and low income areas can still take part in sport.

The more people that participate in sport at grass roots level the better because this should mean that a greater number progress through to elite level. This is known as the Performance Pyramid - large base with lots of people participating at a low/beginner level but narrowing at the top as you reach a very high/elite standard of performance e.g. young girl starting to play badminton at a local club for fun eventually going on to represent Team GB in the Olympics.

It is also important that NGBs try and maximise the exposure they get for their sport in
